Big changes took place in Earl Hall last month. The Columbia University Health Service moved to St. Luke's Hospital's newest annex, at Amsterdam Avenue and 116th Street. The space it occupied in Earl Hall for 30 years is being convicted to meeting rooms and offices for religious counselors.

"For the first time in its 52-year history," said the Reverend

John M. Krumm, Chaplain of the University, "Earl Hall is being used solely for the purpose it was intended."

He referred to the inscription over the east entrance which reads:

"Blessed are the Students that

Religion and Learning May Go

Hand in Hand and Character

Grow with Knowledge."

The Health Service is in the $7,000,000 Florence Stokes Clark Memorial Building which was officially opened on October 18. It occupies one half of the second floor where 12 medical consultation and examination rooms and two psychiatric consultation rooms are available for alling students. The psychiatric facilities are more than double the old. The ninth floor infirmary has 50 beds for students not seriously or critical-

This is the first appearance of "Columbia College Today." It is frankly experimental, designed as a medium to keep you up to date on Columbia College. It is sponsored by the Association of the Alumni of Columbia College and the Deans of the College.

Many of us—for lack of current information on Columbia—think of the College as it was ten or twenty years ago. This is not to imply that all is changed on Morningside. On the contrary, there is a reassuring sense of continuity to Columbia tradition. Yet we cannot escape the fact that time and growth and improvements do change institutions.

Given the facts on Columbia College — its leadership among colleges, its carefully selected and outstanding student body, its distinguished faculty—we hope you will gain a new, revitalized perspective on your own relationship to the College. Let us have your opinion on "Columbia College Today" as we work in your ideas. We hope to publish another issue at the end of the year and possibly a third in the spring.

It will contain a large main lecture, a trophy room and various utility facilities for social functions. It is being built through gifts of alumni and others.

Class Presidents Seek Close Student Ties

Theodore C. Garfield '24, Chairman of the newly-created Columbia College Class Presidents Association, speaking at its first general meeting on September 30 at the Columbia University Club, outlined the aims of the organization as follows:

1. To provide a closer liaison between the class unit and the Alumni Association, the Dean's Office and the College itself.

2. To create a meeting ground for the exchange of ideas between the classes.

3. To compile a directory of all alumni participating in College affairs.

The aims of the Class Presidents Association were endorsed at the meeting by Dean Chamberlain and by Aaron W. Berg '27, Vice President and Chairman of the Standing Committee of the Association. The Alumni Association sponsors the new group.

Other speakers were: Walter R. Mohr '18, College Alumni Association Secretary; Morris W. Watkins '34, Chairman of the Alumni Federation; Harold Miller '24, Association Chairman; Frederick Lane '28, Chairman of the 4th Annual College Forum on Democracy of 1954; and David L. Coffee, John F. Steeves F. '48, John E. Ossa '37, Millard C. Faught '38, James B. Welles Jr. '39, and Julius L. Siff '39, members of the Forum Committee.

To compile a directory of all Columbia College alumni Class Presidents and 26, 1955 declared Forum Chairman, Edwin B. Matzke '24C. More than 65 secondary schools have attended the Forum each year since its inception in 1949.

Its purpose is to stimulate the interest of secondary school students in the problems of democracy and self-government. Each denominational group will be the subject of the seventh annual Columbia College Forum on Democracy which is being kept at a minimum, "in addition to additional gifts from outside sources," he said. "In addition, we are installing a new stage floor for the auditorium, as well as student lounges."

The Forum on Democracy was conceived by the Committee on Secondary Schools of the Association of Alumni of Columbia College. The Association, together with the Deans' Office, jointly sponsors the annual event.

The subject of the first annual Forum seven years ago was "Freedom and Democracy." In succeeding years the Forum has discussed: Freedom and Security (1950); Democracy in a Divided World (1951); Leadership and Democracy (1952); Education and Democracy (1953); The Arts and Democracy (1954); Robert H. Kirs of '76 Calvin Armstrong, an undergraduate student who attended the 1954 Forum, was quoted as follows:

"Yesterday I returned home after spending one of the most intense three days of my seven years in college. In fact 'And so to sleep again' has been my theme song after spending one of the most intense three days of my seven years in college. In fact 'And so to sleep again' has been my theme song..."

The number of scholarships sponsored by each alumni class is determined by:

(a) The amount of unrestricted funds contributed by members of the class (the class total includes gifts for special purposes); and

(b) The monetary value of each scholarship award (scholarship stipends vary).

In addition to the amount above, 36 scholarship members of the Class of 1904 Colleges contributed to Columbia University $10,808.35 as their 50th Anniversary Gift. In addition to the amount above, 157 members of the Class of 1929 contributed to Columbia University $252,021.28 as their 40th Anniversary Gift.

One hundred and forty-four Columbia College students are on partial athletic scholarship raised through the 3rd Annual Columbia College Fund, Dean Nicholas M. McDonagh has announced. They include 21 sophomores, 36 juniors, 39 seniors and 14 graduate students. Two alumni classes—1924 and 1929—lead all the 3rd Annual Columbia College seniors, 36 juniors, 30 sophomores and 6 scholars, and 1923 with five.

"The number of students sponsored by the Fund this year is dependent on the total of class contributions and the size of the scholarship," said Dean McDonagh. "This policy tangibly relieves the economic strain felt by the class scholars."

Deans of the College Once Were Salesmen

Nicholas M. McKnight, the College's first tobacco sales manager, was a lucky man. He knew what he wanted and he got it. When he joined the Columbia staff in 1923, he was appointed to the post of Dean of Students.

McKnight, who was born in 1879, was graduated from Columbia in 1901. He had been a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity and a member of the basketball team.

McKnight's tenure as Dean of Students was short-lived. He resigned in 1925 to join the Coca-Cola Company.

McKnight's tenure as a college dean was brief, but it was significant. He is remembered as a man who was dedicated to the welfare of the students and to the development of the college.

McKnight's legacy lives on in the name of the dormitory that bears his name, McKnight Hall.

leadership in the liberal arts. These two chapters make a con¬ nected history that shows each of the events that had gone before we entered the College, the state of the curriculum while we were undergraduates and the changes that were in process, without our realizing it, during those years, plus a coherent review of the growth and development that have occurred since.

The most delightful section, to me, is Charles Everett's chapter, "Most Glad to Teach," which evokes the personalities—and the characters—of the faculty in the last twenty-five years. They all did their part in the making of the Columbia Blue and reviews the developments that have led to the pre¬ vailing atmosphere of the present day. That makes the book, besides being a history of Columbia, a history of us who knew him in our campus days.

Columbia's Sports Writer Takes Look at the Future

Football

The Columbia football problem in 1954, the 25th Anniversary for Coach Lou Little, is one of rebuilding and slimming. Neither is new to Mort Holden football nor Lou Little.

The Lions lost a good bulk of their 1953 line and have felt the pinch in the front wall primarily. This partly offsets a good group of backs.

Crosstown

The picture in cross-country is about the same as last fall. We will again have a fair cross-country squad. Butch of the team, as they were last year, will be Wilfred Stores and Bill Zwoceq. They finished second in the league last fall.

The Lions have their first losing season in the last 11 and losing 13. There doesn't appear to be reason to expect much improvement this winter.

Catching five of their last six.

Basketball

Prospects do not look good for the Lions' season. Last winter, the Lions had their first losing season since 1944, winning only 11 and losing 13. There doesn't appear to be reason to expect much improvement this winter.

Fri Deiloss lost seven important varsity men, while two experienced sophomores lost five of their last six.

In the winter sports, here is how things look at this early date.
